The Goal:

Five years ago our team did a total renovation of this historic nineteenth-century house, in a traditional style, for the previous owners. The new homeowners, however, were after longer sight lines and clean geometries to complement their lifestyle and to showcase their extensive art collection.

The Challenge:

Although our clients had a completely different aesthetic than the previous owners, they did want to preserve the intricate moldings and casings wherever possible. This required a carefully orchestrated plan of action, and collaboration between the architect, designer and our team.

The Design Summary:

While the exterior of this stately home is characteristic of its historical neighborhood, the interior was completely reborn. The collaboration between our team and architect Adolfo Perez, interior designer Manuel de Santaren, and landscape architect Matthew Cunningham produced a meticulously designed home that is a true reflection of the homeowners.
